

The Institute for Advanced Catholic Studies (IACS) at USC, a global research center designed to strengthen the Catholic intellectual tradition and its ability to contribute to the important questions of the day, is seeking its next president.

IACS is the preeminent institute dedicated to the idea that an ongoing examination of the world from Catholic perspectives is a mission deeply valuable to many, both inside and outside of the Catholic Church. It draws from an international pool of scholars from diverse disciplines and religious traditions to further innovative research and engage in sustained dialogue around the most pressing issues and the deepest concerns of our time.

An independent nonprofit, IACS is located on the campus of, and receives support from, the University of Southern California (USC), one of the world's premier research institutions.
