

Kristin Colberg is an associate professor at Saint John's University and School of Theology and the College of Saint Benedict. Her research and writing focus on questions related to ecclesiology, ecumenism and the two Vatican Councils. She serves as a member of the Anglican-Roman Catholic International Commission (ARCIC) and on the theological commission supporting the Synod on Synodality. She lives in Saint Joseph, Minnesota with her husband, Shawn, and her two daughters, Mary Clare and Catherine.